RESEARCH & DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM - We made some significant strides through our Research & Development program in 2020, and continue to build out the infrastructure to provide long-term support for the program. The paper resulting from fundamental research that we conducted in 2019, "Optimal Bounds on Nonlinear Partial Differential Equations in Model Certification, Validation, and Experimental Design," was accepted and published in a peer-reviewed journal in 2020, and research conducted in 2020 has generated three academic papers that are in various stages of the process of submission for publication. Additionally, our research resulted in the expansion of the capabilities of MYSTIC (<https://pypi.org/project/mystic/>), our open source optimization software framework, to include applications of model validation and optimal design in materials in extreme environments, nanostructures, materials simulations and strength models, chemical reaction surfaces, and the failure of shielding under particle radiation. Release and development versions of the software are publicly available for all to use, free of charge, through the Python Package Index, linked above, and our GitHub page at <https://github.com/uqfoundation>. Finally, we partnered with commercial organizations in the Defense and Genetics Research industries to assist in the development of their own

4b (Code: ) (Expenses $ 35,644 including grants of $ 0) (Revenue $ 45,133)

ADVISORY SERVICES PROGRAM - Through our Advisory Services program the Uncertainty Quantification Foundation works to broaden the application of uncertainty quantification (UQ) across many sectors of industry, working with organizations to provide scientific and technical expertise on their projects. We believe that by demonstrating the value of uncertainty qualification through these services, we can create an increased demand for practitioners in the field of UQ and drive greater focus on developing robust uncertainty qualification programs at universities and within graduate programs. In 2020 we conducted two such projects. In the first project we provided a critical peer-review and technical advice in the pre-publication stage of a research paper on evaluating predictive models of the induction of seismic activity through stresses incident to natural gas extraction operations. In the second project we worked with an organization in the energy industry to assist them in integrating advanced optimization frameworks, through MYSTIC, into their software for optimizing hybrid energy grids.
